White and Williams LLP Donates Nearly 2,000 Books to Adopted School

The law firm of White and Williams LLP gives back to the community throughout the year. The firm participates in a School Adoption Initiative as a way to devote time and money to education and engage in meaningful opportunities for students.

Back in February, White and Williams LLP collaborated with the non-profit organization Bags of Books to collect new and "gently used" books for the students of George W. Childs School, their Philadelphia adopted school. The firm's collection yielded almost 2,000 books.

Seventeen year-old Alexa Grabele started Bags of Books after learning about the lack of access to books in homes within her own community. By closing the gaps to access age-appropriate books, the non-profit aims to improve childhood literacy across the country. Since it was established seven years ago, Bags of Books has donated an amazing 140,000 books to people in need. The School Adoption Initiative continues to be something the firm supports, and they look forward to future endeavors with this meaningful cause. White and Williams LLP has been a Qualified Member of Best's Insurance Professionals and Claims Resource for over 50 years.
